161 CLARENCE STREET, SYDNEY

THE PROJECT

The site at 161 Clarence Street formed part of a major inner-city residential and commercial redevelopment. Some nine thousand artefacts were recovered from two early nineteenth century wells, excavated by archaeologists during the project. The artefacts were excellent vehicles for telling the site's fascinating story.

OUR ROLE

Extent Heritage prepared and implemented a heritage interpretation plan for 'Skittle Lane'. We led the research, exhibition design, content preparation and installation of an engaging and informative display that showcased some of the many artefacts from the site.

VALUE UNLOCKED

Our interpretation specialists formed part of a multi-disciplinary team that included our own historians, artefact analysts and archaeologists. Extent Heritage made the site's fascinating history a feature of the development, conserving heritage and sharing our past with others while adding value to the premises.
